GENERAL INFORMATION

Tumbling out of the Angolan highlands two rivers converge to form the Okavango River, which spills itself onto the great sea of sand that is Botswana's Kalahari Desert. An average of 10 million cubic metres of water annually floods 15,000 km² of Kalahari, forming the world-famous Okavango Delta, largest inland delta in the world.

The contrast of desert and wetland is what makes the Okavango unique and fosters the bewildering variety of life that it supports. Dry land and wetland species cohabit, creating unique and startling associations of plants, amphibians, birds, mammals, and reptiles.

This family-oriented camp offers guests the highest standards of comfort whilst immersing in the environment.

Scattered in the forest of a large, beautiful, and palm-studded island deep in the Okavango Delta, Delta Camp is accessed by light aircraft from Maun, Botswana

The buildings blend into the landscape. This sometimes means that a tree grows through a roof or a floor, it always means that you will find no glass in the windows, and it very often means that the building itself is elevated onto a deck. Each spacious, elegant chalet is individually designed and decorated to fit discreetly into its setting and to take advantage of the spectacular views of the surrounding bush.

ACCOMMODATION

The camp's chalets are designed and built to take advantage of the many indigenous, old-growth trees of the island forest. The camp imports the bare minimum – locally grown reed and grass are our principal means of construction where feasible. Where it is not, we use easily removable canvas. Our furniture is locally made from, wherever possible, locally grown material. We support local artists and artisans.

Each chalet is en suite with hot and cold running water, a shower with a view, a variety of beds and areas in which to relax, mosquito netting and solar-powered electric lighting. The chalets are situated around the property to take advantage of the views of the surrounding bush and floodplains.

Children of all ages are welcome. There are two family rooms to accommodate families. Delta Camp has no age restrictions as believes that guests know their children and their capabilities, and as they will not be going on safari activities with other guests, they have no one but themselves to consider. There are games in the sitting area and reference books that will help to entertain and illuminate the children's experience.

MEALS

There are flexible mealtimes to accommodate sightings and Delta Camp is happy to accommodate alternative family dining times and to prepare simple food for children. Coffee and tea is always available and the open-policy bar is always open.

The morning starts off with an early rise, after which coffee and snacks are available before guests head out for the first activity. Once back at camp, you are greeted with a hearty, full breakfast before the siesta period of relaxation. Following lunch, the guests will departure on their late afternoon activity in the cooler afternoon. The day is ended with a dinner at the dining hall where guests can mingle and enjoy some drinks. A private dinner under the stars on the camp's satellite deck can be arranged.

ACTIVITIES

Born in the Okavango, raised in the Okavango, Delta Camp's guides take you deep into the Okavango in hand-made dug-out canoes. They will also take you walking on the many islands in the area.

Your guide joins you on your arrival and remains exclusively yours for the duration of your stay. Armed with a lifetime's experience and eyes like a hawk, he will accompany you on all your excursions, be they brief forays from the comfort of the lodge, full-day outings with a picnic lunch, or extended camping expeditions into the Okavango. Dedicated child orientated guides walk with families to enrich the safari experience for all members.

The Delta Camp experience is cultural as well as being a wildlife and wilderness one and spending time in the company of a man who has lived his life in this wild place, and perhaps even visiting his home, is a revelation to many visitors, and a lesson in differing values and perceptions.
